Really liked the music. Graphics were ok ut very basic - which actually fit the music ok. OVERall though it was just frustrating. WHEN I play a roguelike I want to feel as though when I die it's my fault. With this game I felt like it was entirely up to chance. Maybe after youve found all the mystery pick ups its easier but I don't like having to die this much just to learn how to play the game.. Looks like a good spacey, pixel-art 2d scrolling shooter. Kinda has the feel of an updated Asteroids and/or Defender. But with better control and procedurally generated gameplay elements. Overall map, level map layout and visual, and items names are generated. Item effects and enemies are randomly selected. Visual issues with the game are now gone (headache mode is gone, thanks Ben!). Pros: u2022 Pyoo pyoo. u2022 Procedurally generated maps. u2022 Random loot. u2022 o y am i ded again. u2022 Very responsive developer. I reported three issues. Three issues were fixed. Quickly even. Got a personal response, too. And this, while other features and fixes are getting pushed out too.. This is worth far more than the $5 I spent on it. The planetary action reminds me strongly of Solar Jetman (NES), but the worlds seem to be made from scratch each time, so each one is always a new experience on dropping out of orbit. There are several different sorts of worlds, each with its own hazards that only get worse as one progresses along the path to solving the mystery. A wealth of powerups (and power-downs, some pretty severe) make each playthrough a real adventure. It's basically a sometimes very tough free-scrolling shmup with roguelike elements. Some acquisitions are "Collection" items that affect all future playthroughs. The music is pretty sweet, and the sound effects are distinctive for each enemy and its fire. (This bit here contained a complaint about the "Teleporting Eyeball" enemy being hard to notice and showing up too close to the player's ship to avoid, sometimes, but the developer has addressed both those concerns on this first day of 2016, and made a previously somewhat cumbersome equipment system a bunch easier to use, to boot.) tl;dr: GET THIS if you like solidly-done blasty gameplay and getting cool (and uncool) items, with a nice bit of story on the side, and lovely music all around.. Enjoyable relaxing game. I have played many rogue-likes and I found this one on the easy side which is okay. This game is in the style of Defender(Atari) and Aqua Kitty. The music and atmosphere is the standout. The different planets could stand out more by having different monster sets. For the price i recomend it. I am looking forward to giving co-op a try.. Its good when you are bored.
